MOKENA GIRL CHOSEN FOR BAND SPONSOR AT J. T. H. S.

Business Too Good For Mokena Business Man: No Advertising

By THE OFFICE BOY

Well sir, this week the boss put me on the display advertising staff, and I thought that would be an easy job. The first call I made was at the Mokena Motors, Kaiser-Frazer dealers in Mokena, because they ran a nice sized ad last week. I went right up to Blaine Saxton, the manager, real brave and said, "Mr. Saxton, I'm here to sell you a display ad in the Semmler papers. You had a nice big one last week and I thought you would have a nice big one this week too."

Then Mr. Saxton pushed his hat to the back of his head and said, "Sunny, it ain't as easy as all that." And I said well, don't advertising pay?

Mr. Saxton said, "That's just the trouble, my boy. That ad I ran last week sold every used car that I had on the lot, so I guess we won't run another one until we get some more trade-ins."

Then I went mooching back to the office real down-hearted and told the boss what happened. Then I says to him, "Where can I find an advertiser who DON'T want to sell anything, I think I could sell him." He suggested that I try food stores and such like, where people eat all they buy and there is a constant demand for their goods." So here I go again, pounding the sidewalks with my feet.

C. U. Later, P. S.: Advertising business may not be so good but I'll bet if I do sell an ad, whoever I sell it to will be a satisfied customer. And if you don't think this story is true, just phone Mokena 3411 and ask for Blaine Saxton and he'll tell you the same as I did. If any of you other merchants want results in advertising, call either Mokena 3521 or Tinley Park 728 and ask for me.

STATEMENT OF COUNTY CLERK

Since the audit of the books of the Will County Clerk, as conducted by the Raymond Blunt and Company of Chicago, an error in that audit was uncovered by the deputies of the county clerk's office amounting to $503.58.

Mr. Joseph H. Hartley, county clerk, and his attorney, Charles Robson, in a conference last Saturday with State's Attorney John I. Pearce, promised him full co-operation of the office and said if there is an actual shortage, "the same will be made good."

A statement made by Mr. Hartley is as follows:

"I have received a letter from the state's attorney, Mr. Pearce requesting that an apparent shortage in this office (county clerk) be made good. A copy of the audit has been furnished my office, and is now being checked by my deputies."

"I have seen the state's attorney and have offered him the full co-operation of my office for any investigation he wishes to make of this matter."

"It appears that a former deputy in this office may be short in his accounts as he is the one who was responsible for the handling of the cash and the accounts in this office. I have requested him to attend a conference regarding these alleged irregularities which should be held in a short time."

"If, after an investigation of myself and my deputies, it appears that there is an actual shortage in my office, the same will be made good."

Both Mr. Hartley and his attorney said that they have had no word from the deputy as to when he will confer with them. However, both said they hoped it would be at an early date as they are anxious to have the matter settled.

SLAUGHTERING OF HORSES IN ORLAND DECLARED A NUISANCE

Mr. Steve Nemeth of Orland Park who recently circulated a petition to overcome an alleged nuisance of a slaughtering house, saw the cause which he sponsored victor at a conference recently.

Assistant State's Atty. Handelman said last week that if slaughtering of horses in a barn on the north side of 159th street near 118th avenue in Orland township, is not discontinued within a week, court action will be taken to stop it.

Ruling that the slaughtering is a violation of the county zoning ordinance and a nuisance because of unsanitary conditions, Handelman told Harry J. Berkma, operator of the business, and his attorney, Thomas J. Carroll, that operations must be discontinued "immediately." Handelman said a week's time would be given to "clean up the place."

The Patterson Brothers Duck Farm on route 45 near Frankfort, suffered $8,000 damage from fire last Sunday when what is believed to have been spontaneous combustion in an old corn crib, containing wood shavings, burst into flames.

Mr. Conrad Oetter of Frankfort who was working on the new house of Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Patterson noticed the smoke and at once telephoned the Frankfort fire department, but as members were all in church they did not hear the call. He then went to the village and rang the fire alarm himself. The fire fighters, hearing the alarm, hurried from the church, and manned the fire equipment without changing to working clothes.

The New Lenox and Mokena fire departments also answered the call and greatly assisted in combatting the flames. Mr. and Mrs. Herschel Patterson, who live in the first large farm house, were not at home, but came soon, and Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Patterson returned that evening from a week's motor trip to Arizona and other southern states.

Over 1000 ducks were destroyed in the fire which swept through the corn crib and five duck houses. A large tractor, valued at $2,500 and which was stored in one of the buildings, was also destroyed, as well as a grinder.

There was insurance on the buildings and tractor, but insurance companies do not insure ducks etc.

Lincoln Estates Boy Signed By St. Louis Browns

Unexpected honor came this week to a former Lincoln Estates boy, Jerry McLean, 20, when he was chosen by a St. Louis Browns scout to be signed up for their baseball team.

Jerry has lived in Lincoln Estates all his young life until a year ago when he moved with his mother to Gary, Ind. There he played with the East Gary Merchants as first baseman.

The Browns scout watched his playing for six weeks, and was convinced that Jerry had the stuff needed as a ball player.

In the spring Jerry will go to San Antonio, Texas on their training farm, at the end of which time, he will be sent to Springfield, Ill. where he will play until he is ready for the big league.

Jerry is employed at Gary and had planned to enter college this fall, but now that is out, and he will continue his work until he leaves for Texas in the spring.

All his friends in Lincoln Estates are mighty proud of him and they are expecting to hear more from him in the big league news.

While attending the Ann Rutledge public school he won the Walker medal for highest average in his class, and while he attended Bloom township high school, from which he graduated, he was mayor of that high school's student government.

Mystery Animal A Panther?

Two people believe they have had a glimpse of the "Mystery animal"—one on Bruce road and the other in Ridgewood, and think it is a panther—still at large.

Neighbors File Complaint Handelman's statements were made at a conference called by him to obtain evidence in the case, which involved a question of whether the horse slaughtering is a legal non-conforming use in a farm zone because it may have been established prior to enactment of the zoning ordinance in 1940.

The ruling that the slaughtering is a nuisance and a zoning violation was based on a "complete study of the case," Handelman said. Regarding the question of whether the abattoir might be a legal nonconforming use, he said Berkman is operating a "commercial venture in an area zoned for farming" and that the slaughtering "constitutes an expansion (of previous similar uses) which cannot be condoned under the place."

GROWTH OF POLIO CARE TEAM

1949

Medical care for polio patients is costing the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis more money than ever before—because better treatment is available today than formerly, as the accompanying chart reveals. Until 1938 when the National Foundation was formed, a physician and a nurse usually comprised the best available care. Today, modern polio treatment may include 13 specialized services, provided by an entire TEAM of professional workers. This expanded care has cost National Foundation Chapters millions in March of Dimes funds. More money is needed immediately to continue these services. Support the POLIO EPIDEMIC EMERGENCY DRIVE to help care for today's polio patients. Send your contribution now to POLIO, care of your local Post Office.

The Sumacs

By Roberts Mann, Supt. of Conservation, Forest Preserve District of Cook County

Jack Frost has been experimenting along the roadsides, fence-rows and woodland borders, dabbling the sumacs here and there with bright colors, some orange, some scarlet, some crimson, and some a deep maroon. Soon there will be solid clumps of these shrubs, the largest almost small trees, conspicuous among their plant neighbors as masses of glorious hue.

Sumacs (pronounced "shoe-macks") a shrub, is not an ivy. It has grey-have distinction at all times. In winter, their branches and thick blunt-tipped stems, held at characteristic angles, stand out against the snow as stiffly and precisely as formal wallpaper patterns. Very late in spring, their cottony buds put out long feathery fronds of compound leaves, rich green above and silvery below. In summer they are bedecked with many large erect greenish-yellow clusters of small blossoms, followed in August by compact cones of rusty-red fruit upheld like candles. Incidentally, their tart little berries are relished by many kinds of birds and can be used to make "Indian lemonade" or chewed to slake your thirst on a long hike.

Of the several hundred species in the sumac family, mostly found in warm or tropical regions, six kinds are common in the Middle West. Surprisingly, one of them is Poison Ivy which, although it has the habits of a vine and seldom becomes a shrub, is not an ivy. It has grey-white or ivory fruit instead of red, and has three leaves instead of long compound leaves with many leaflets. Another is the Poison Sumac, a large shrub or small tree found only in bog areas, with compound leaves resembling those of a white ash tree but with the leaflets in opposite pairs along a reddish stalk. It's poisonous effect, causing an itching rash and watery blisters upon many people, is the same but usually more severe than that of poison ivy.

The largest of our native sumacs is the Staghorn, which sometimes grows 30 feet tall with a diameter of 8 inches, so-called because its branches are covered with fuzz, and when bare, look like a deer's antlers "in the velvet." Widely distributed, its soft wood is seldom used although very beautiful: a golden yellow with streaks of brown and green.

The smaller Smooth Sumac is most common, most likely to grow in large colonies, and therefore most notable for its wondrous coloring in autumn. The Shining or Dwarf Sumac is smaller, similar in appearance and found in similar places, but its leaves have peculiar wing-like extensions on the central stalk that bears the leaflets. The Fragrant Sumac, common on dry ridges and rocky bluffs, also has red fruit but it has only three leaflets like poison ivy. However, these leaflets are very hairy and very fragrant when crushed. The Skunkbush, found farther west, is similar to the fragrant sumac but its leaflets have an unpleasant odor when crushed. The Poison Oaks of the south and of the west coast are other relatives.

The stems and branches of the smooth and staghorn sumacs have large pith centers which can be punched out to make popguns, pea-shooters, and the spiles inserted into sugar maple trees to draw off the sap. Their leaves and bark contain tannin formerly used to tan leather and make ink but, in winter, rabbits will nibble sumac bark in preference to that of other trees and shrubs. The saps of these two sumacs are milky, but that of poison sumac is clear, turning black and hard when exposed to the air, like that of its relative, the Japanese lacquer-tree.

As a little boy wonderingly said this summer, "Every place you look, there's something to see!"

Rufe's Ramblings
By RUFÉ PICKETT

I've heard John McCormack sing. I've heard Billy Sunday preach. I've heard many other famous voices, but the one that seems most indelible in my memory was a hotel porter's: "Here stan's the 'lef' hand coach. Free permit to the Blue Ridge Inn Hotel. The hotel on the cawner. The leading house in the city where all the commercial and traveling men stop . . ."

The freight depot in Mount Airy was not always thus. Way back yonder friends met friends there, or said their goodbyes, according to which direction the passenger train was headed. Among all the wagons, buggies, and hacks which assembled before train time, it was taken for granted that the bus would pull along side of the waiting room, stop, and back up till the hind wheel rested against a fixed scotching rock with the entrance at rear steps in plain view of the passengers as they climbed the stairs from the track. One evening the porter was a little late in leaving the hotel. When he turned the corner of Main and Franklin he saw that old Joe and old Sam—the two big black horses—were already hitched up and waiting, so he jumped onto the step, gave a couple of jerks on the cord which rang a bell over the driver's seat out in front, and away they went. The train was coming to a stop when they got in their location at the depot, and after hollering his famous invitation and helping load some thirty or more guests, he again gave the signal to go. Arriving at the Blue Ridge Inn and helping everybody into the lobby with their baggage he once more rang the signal bell which started the empty conveyance back to the delivery stable, and as old Joe and Sam came plodding in with the outfit, Bill Pace, the fellow who had hitched them up exclaimed: "My gosh. Yancy Graves told me that he couldn't be here tonight and I forgot to call another driver for the hotel bus."

Mr. Will Pace and his son George of Mount Airy, North Carolina were recent visitors at our home on Collins street in Blue Island. I was mighty glad to have them because they are from my old home town down yonder, and I was especially glad for Mr. Pace to meet so many of my Yankee friends. Some few years ago I told about the incident in the enclosed Rambling and was very much embarrassed a couple of days later when I received an honorary life membership in a regularly constituted Liars Club. Since Mr. Pace's visit up in these parts I now have the distinction of being the only person ever to be honored with such a membership for telling something just as it really happened.

Sure You Haven't A
"Blind Spot"?

As I was driving down Main Street last Saturday, another car swung out right in front of me. It turned out to be Buck Blake. He wasn't going fast. It was just that he had something else on his mind at that particular moment.

Buck's really one of the nicest fellows I've ever known. But, sometimes he gets to day-dreaming on the road. He sort of gets a "blind spot" to what's going on about him!

Now, lots of normally considerate folks have their "blind spots."

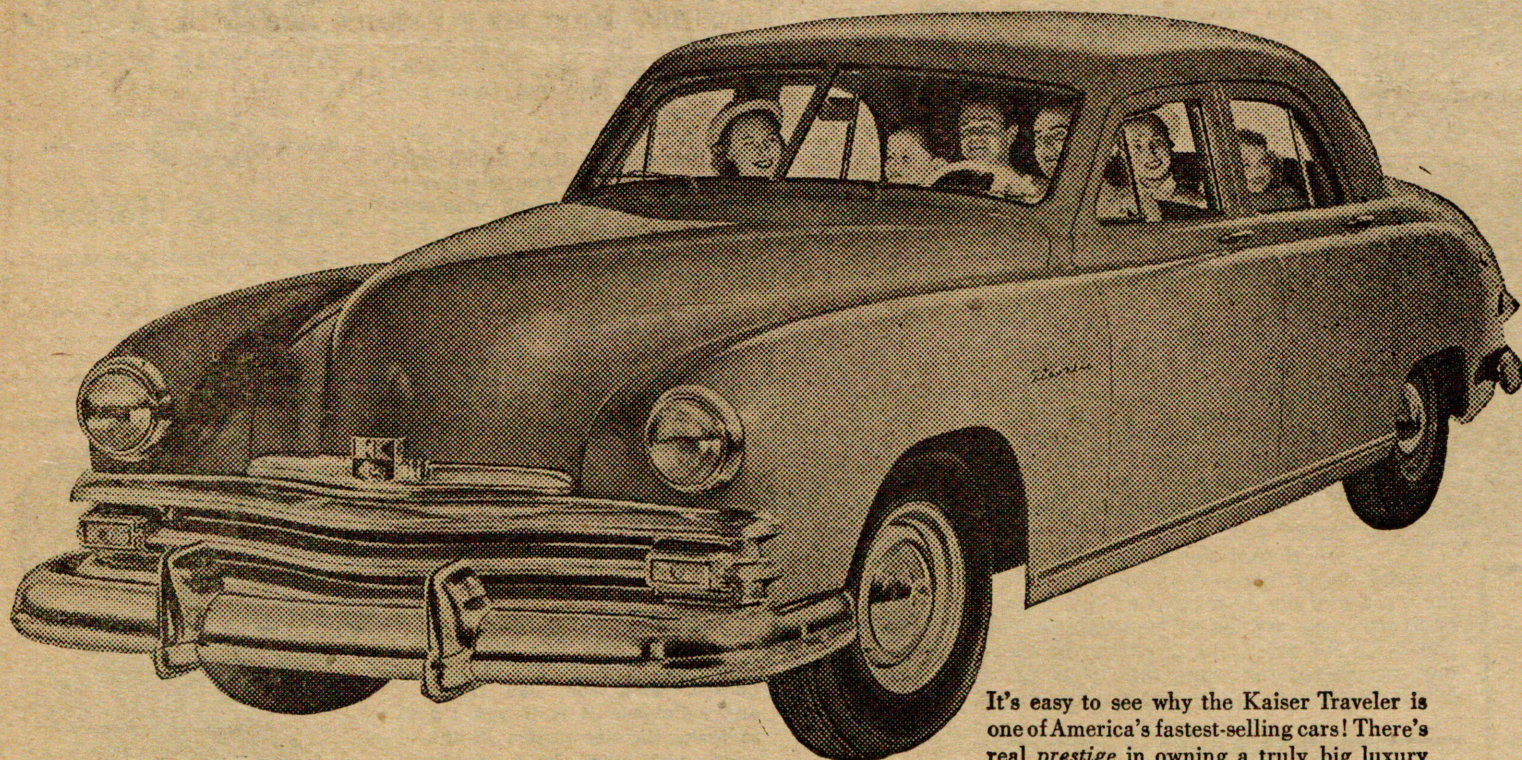

It could be anything from day-dreaming while driving a car to humming out loud at the movies.

From where I sit, it's mighty important to be on guard against your own "blind spots." The other fellow has a right to his "share of the road," too—whether it's having a taste for a temperate glass of sparkling beer or a desire to listen to some classical music if he wants to.

What's phosphorus to a pig?

Just a half a pound of your 250-lb. pig is phosphorus. This seems a small amount. But without it, your pig would die. And there are other minerals just as vital to livestock. Some they need in quite large amounts... calcium and sodium as well as phosphorus. Others we call trace elements. These they need in very small amounts... such as cobalt, iron, copper and manganese.

But your animals do need these trace elements. The people at the agricultural colleges have proved that past all doubt. Some minerals are a "must" if you want to raise healthy, fast-gaining cattle. That goes for lambs and hogs, too. For example, these men find that grass and grains in Dade County, Florida, are short of copper and iron. Clallam County, Washington, needs iodine to check goiter. They know that San Diego County, California, hasn't enough phosphorus. In Aroostook County, Maine, the scarce mineral is cobalt. Ranchers and farmers in these four corners of the country have this problem. Their feeds and forages are short of one or more vital minerals. Many other areas share the problem, including parts of the great Corn Belt.

But you ask, "How can I spot animals which suffer from mineral shortage?" It's not too easy. If the lack is serious, your stock may have rickets, "big neck," anemia or other ailments. But there are some early symptoms you can spot. These are bone chewing, loss of appetite, slow gains, rough and scrubby coats. Or just a general unthrifty condition gives you the clue. If you start feeding a mineral which contains the essential trace elements, you may bring them around fast. But if this doesn't work, then you should consult your veterinarian, county agent or agricultural college.

The common mineral deficiencies in your area are known. By feeding mineral-balanced rations, you can correct these lacks. Or you can build up the mineral content of the soil. Either, or both, of these will help you grow healthier livestock, at a lower cost.

Supplemental Mineral for Wintering Range Ewes

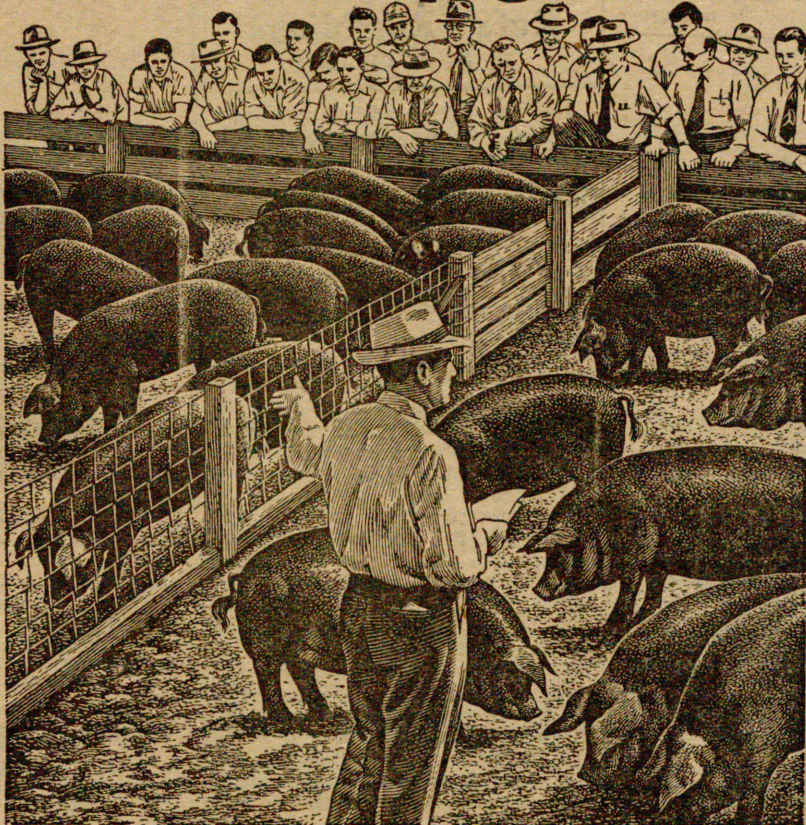

by William H. Burkitt
Montana State College

Thirteen mineral elements are known to be necessary for normal functioning of an animal body. However, this does not mean that all 13 must be supplied in a mineral mixture. Many of them are present, under usual feeding conditions, in sufficient amounts for breeding ewes. Those lacking in Montana include sodium and chlorine (salt), iodine, phosphorus, and possibly cobalt.

Lack of sufficient iodine in the ration of pregnant ewes results in lambs being born with "big neck" (goiter). Thin wool in lambs may also result. If dead or weak lambs have shown "big neck" or thin wool at birth in past years, stabilized iodized salt should definitely be fed the ewes this winter.

Phosphorus deficiency may exist in wintering range ewes, particularly if there is little or no supplemental feeding. Abortions and weak lambs may result from deficient phosphorus. Pregnant ewes should have from 0.16% to 0.18% phosphorus in their feed. Many grass hays and mature range grasses contain less than 0.15% phosphorus and some contain as low as 0.04% phosphorus. Bone meal, defluorinated rock phosphates, and monosodium phosphate are satisfactory sources of phosphorus. Palatability and consumption may be improved by mixing with salt.

Cobalt is believed to be needed by micro-organisms in the paunch. A lack results in loss of appetite, less feed consumption, and eventually starvation. A possible cobalt deficiency may be guarded against by mixing 1 ounce of cobalt salt with each 100 pounds of stock salt. Cobalt carbonate, chloride, or sulfate are all satisfactory. (Editor's note: The principles of nutrition discussed above apply to most kinds of livestock and in all parts of the country.)

Hello Again!

We are glad to be back with the Swift page of information and ideas. What did we do all summer? Well, among other things, we visited with farmers, ranchers, agricultural editors and educators. And we rounded up the facts we need to make these messages interesting and useful to you producers. As we said away back in 1944—"This is your page, and we welcome suggestions from our readers." We still do. Just write to me at Swift & Company, Chicago 9, Illinois... And when you're in Chicago, drop in and see us.

LET'S SUPPORT OUR "MEAT TEAM"—You know, times change—but some folks don't change with the times. I'm thinking of the type of man who always thinks that someone is getting the best of him in business. He sells a load of steers. No matter what his return, he's not satisfied—the packer, the commission man, the retailer—somebody else always gets a "bigger slice." But, during this past summer, I talked to a lot of people about the livestock-meat industry and our mutual problems. And I found a refreshing, encouraging attitude—"Sure, we got problems. Who hasn't these days? But if producer, packer and retailer work together as the 'meat team,' we'll work things out..." It's just good business to have a decent regard for the contributions made by other members of your team. I hope you have followed the "Meat Team" advertisements of the American Meat Institute and will talk to your neighbors about them.

FACT CONFIRMED—Out in the West, whenever I passed a town with a local meat-packing plant, I thought, "This town, out here where there is lots of livestock, is well served by that local plant. But what about the distant cities filled with meat eaters and no nearby livestock production to speak of?" I know for a fact that meat has to travel an average of more than 1,000 miles to reach those consumers. The only way they can get meat is through the low-cost processing and marketing services provided by nationwide meat packers, like Swift & Company.

F.M. Simpson.

Agricultural Research Dept.

MONEY and MEAT—In the fall months we run into an unusual situation in the livestock-meat packing industry. At that time we often see the year's high market for top finished beef cattle. And this top price usually is being paid when the average price for all cattle is moving in the opposite direction.

The high price is explained by the fact that during the fall we usually have the shortest supply of the year of well finished, long fed cattle. Brisk demand for this short supply naturally will force the price up.

The lower average price results from the annual move to market of huge numbers of grass-fed cattle.

About 20 per cent of all the cattle and lambs slaughtered during a whole year must be handled in September and October. Meat from these animals being slaughtered any given day generally is on the dinner table in less than 14 days.

Folks aren't likely to have any more money to spend on food during the fall months than in February, when fewer meat animals are being marketed.

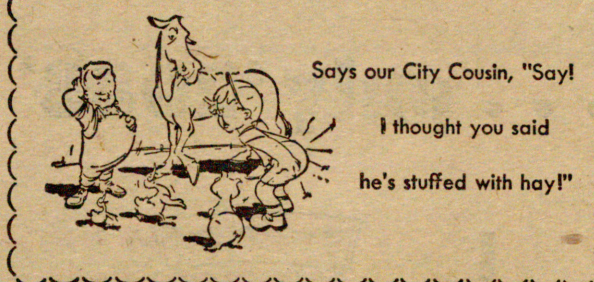

Since beef and lamb is largely a fresh meat business, there's a lot of meat to eat during the fall months. Consequently, since consumers have no more money to spend, meat prices have to be lowered. And that's just what happens, as it usually does with an increased amount of meat to be sold and no increase in the amount of money with which to buy it. These lower meat prices are most noticeable, of course, in the large consuming centers where surplus supplies always can be moved at a price.

Naturally, then, livestock prices follow meat prices. Producers should keep in mind that the prices they receive for their livestock are governed by what the packer can get for the meat and the by-products. This is perfectly demonstrated, as we have pointed out above, when the price for one kind of cattle, in short supply, is moving up at the same time that prices of other cattle, in heavy supply, are moving down.

Religion and Habits

Lesson for September 18, 1949

IF RELIGION is not moral, it is a poor, flimsy, no-good religion. If morality is not religious, it soon cracks. Religion has to be moral and morality has to be religious, or else both of them lose their excuse for existence. This is not a new idea. It was in the Bible long ago. Our Psalms for this week are among those that bring out this truth: God is interested in how people live.

He is interested in what they do seven days and seven nights a week; he is interested in their habits as much as their souls. Psalms 15 and 24 are so plain on this point that they need no explaining.

Churches and Liquor

Don't Mix

THIS truth, that right religion and right behavior are twins, lights up all of life like a floodlight; but since this is our temperance lesson, let us focus it more or less on one spot.

It is a sore spot: the drink habit. Why does the church make such a fuss about people drinking? Catholic churches are opposed to liquor in excess, and most Protestant churches are opposed to liquor, period.

The movies have made the "binge," the hangover, almost respectable; but the church knows better. Why? Will the time ever come when the churches are not opposed to the liquor business? No, it will not; because the churches know what liquor does.

The minister is usually the man (along with the lawyer and doctor and the sheriff) who has to pick up the pieces when drink gets a man or a woman and breaks up a family. The minister gets behind the scenes, he knows that some funerals would not have been funerals if it had not been for drink.

The car that "went out of control," the disease that should not have been fatal, the family quarrel that grew to hatred and violence—he sees enough of these caused by alcohol, to have no illusions about the stuff.

A Psalm in Reverse

IF THERE is a single reader of these lines who imagines that religion is only a "matter of the soul" and has nothing to do with what people eat or drink, then let him try a little experiment with the 15th Psalm.

As it stands in the Bible, it is a description of the kind of man who can appear without shame before God—in short, of the religious-and-moral man.

Now beginning with verse 2, take the Psalm phrase by phrase, and see how false and ridiculous it is if you try to make the description fit the man with the drink habit. "The victim of drink walketh uprightly, and worketh righteousness—"! Quite the contrary, he seems to be doing his best to ruin his own happiness and that of others.

"The drunkard speaketh the truth in his heart"—! There is one truth he never speaks in his heart: I am a drunkard. The one thing the victim of alcohol never admits till it is too late (if ever) is the hold which alcohol has on him. "He that backbiteth not with his tongue, nor taketh up a reproach against his neighbor"—!

Contempt Is No Cure

WELL, read on for yourself. The slave to alcohol (and many a man is chained to it, who would feel insulted if you called him an alcoholic) certainly does not fit the description of the man whose life God approves.

But the Christian will by no means think his duty done merely by sitting in the scornful seat, or being an abstainer himself, or even by helping those who have fallen into the pit. He will remember that an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure.

The liquor business has no conscience. It sometimes comes out with pious remarks about temperance—but it keeps right on advertising. It knows no law but profit.

The only whole-hearted workers for temperance will always be the people who make no money out of intemperance. And the most effective workers for temperance will be those who themselves, in all their habits, give examples in life of what they preach.

At the last regular meeting, Sept.

with reference to a proposed Band in Mokena, resulted in that a Committee was appointed to work out preliminary details. Numerous ideas as how a band could be organized were submitted by members of the Post and we are confident that a soon as the committee can make a report, more details will be made known.

Our new Post Home and Commu-

well under way. The roof is nearing completion, the basement is being prepared for pouring of the con-and from now on you will see lights burning in the evening, which means that interested citizens and Post members will be at work on various jobs about the building. A tremendous amount of work remains yet to be done and if any one cares to come down to the build-we will welcome you and you will get a kick out of it, for when the

The first square dance of the sea-it is quite difficult to go on into

SLAUGHTERING OF HORSES—
Handelman's statement that the slaughtering constitutes a nuisance was based on complaints of nearby residents, several of whom attended the conference, as well as on reports of two inspections made by the county health department. Benn J.
Leland, chief sanitary engineer of the department, read these reports at the conference.

Innumerable flies, unbearable odors, and a partly covered septic tank which was overflowing into an open drainage ditch connecting with a nearby stream were among unsanitary conditions at the barn reported by the health department. Open barrels of hides, bones, and en-

Leland concluded that the slaughtering constitutes a nuisance. "Un-sanitary conditions at the barn," he said, "provide breeding places for flies. The effluent from the septic tank could and would cause pollution of the nearby stream. The odors were offensive to nearby residents."
Atty Carroll stated after the conference that "we will give full cooperation in cleaning up anything that is considered a nuisance at the slaughtering barn."

May Fight Zoning Charge
Carroll said he would "consider" whether he will contest Handelman's ruling that the abattoir is a violation of the zoning ordinance. He added that specific evidence for Berkman's side was provided in a written statement of the former owner of the 20 acres on which the barn is located.

William W. Blue, 9403 Ashland av., the former owner, said in this statement that he had owned the property from 1935 to 1946, (at which latter date Berkman began his slaughtering operations) and that the property had been used continuously for slaughtering.
Steven Nemeth, who presented the protest petition signed by 73 residents near the abattoir; Mrs. Nemeth, Mrs. Victor Polak, Mrs. Henry Hicks, and Elmer Aggen were property owners who attended the conference. They said the odors and flies from the barn were a source of much annoyance as well as a health hazard. Nemeth contested Blue's statement and said neighbors could prove no slaughtering had taken place on the 20 acre tract before 1940.
